Atheism is, in the broadest sense, the absence of belief in the existence of deities. Less broadly, atheism is the rejection of belief that any deities exist. When we talk about religion around here, we often end up talking about something that falls between agnosticism and atheism. That's because public intellectuals who comment on religion frequently fall into those camps. The Boy Scouts of America makes a division between its Scouting programs and the Learning for Life program. The traditional Scouting programs are Cub Scouting, Boy Scouting, and Venturing. Great list — doesn't leave much does it? But on a meta level I don't think we can expect most believing Christians to agree with it. Even though it's accurate, most Christians would probably find it patronising because they'd believe it mischaracterises Christianity (in the same way atheists might take offence at the other lists., Does God Exist The Debate Between Theists Atheists.
